

Ownashare booking system explained

A booking chart for the following calendar year is circulated in agreed priority order, typically starting in July.

Each owner has a priority for that year, and moves up broadly a couple of places each year, as part of a six-year cycle.

(Each share holding swaps places in rotation with the shareholding above or below them on the chart and annually moves up the chart from bottom to top in six years)

After a year at the top of the list, the pair goes to the bottom for the next year, to start the 6-year cycle again.

Each owner can choose two weeks (separately or as a fortnight) in the 'high season' (April to September inclusive), as well as one week in the remainder of the year.

Some boats book a fourth week.

Once this process is complete for all shares, owners then may choose a fourth week if they wish, but this is done in REVERSE order so that those who got last choice for their first three weeks get first choice for their fourth. Typically two weeks are allowed for winter maintenance.

Some boats use the remaining weeks in a request only system:

priority is again given in order from the BOTTOM (like the fourth weeks), except that once one week has been claimed in this round the winner drops their priority for any more.
